

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

The Spring Medicine for exhausted nerves and the overworked body. Only when the nerves are weakened and inflamed do you know that they exist.

JOHN H. WILLIAMSON, Grand Island, Cal., writes:

"Although I am 73 years old, I have no particular disease, and am a hard worker. I use Paine's Celery Compound as a spring medicine to restore lost energy. I have used the Compound for years and find it very beneficial. When I take it, it seems as though I did double work."

Paine's Celery Compound is a medicine compounded to strengthen nerves, stomach, liver and kidneys.

LETTERS TO CONGRESS

Personal Appeals More Popular Than Petitions.

ALMS ON PENDING LEGISLATION.

Public Opinion on Porto Rico, the Bond Bill and Stamp Tax—A Smooth Senator—The Race Question—Senator Tillman a Linguist.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—[Special.] The petitions sent to congress do not always indicate what the people want, and it often happens that the most serious topic before congress and the country does not call forth any petition or at least very few. Nothing has so stirred the country in recent years as the Porto Rican tariff question, yet there are but very few petitions received on the subject. Those in favor of a tariff come mostly from the cigar makers' unions. Those in favor of free trade are from some isolated organizations. The facts are the people are too much interested in personal letters to senators and representatives. Outside of this most interesting subject there are at present petitions against the bond bill amending the postal laws relating to second class mail matter. These come from publications which will be affected by it. There seems to be quite a concerted movement among the manufacturers and dealers in proprietary articles for a repeal of the stamp tax on such goods. From the far west there are protests against a bill leasing the public lands for grazing purposes. There are other petitions filling from four to ten pages of The Record, but many of them relate to matters that members of congress have no idea of considering.

Senator Allison's Way.
It has been understood that Senator Allison is one of the "smooth" men of the senate, and by that I mean he has a way of getting along without antagonizing senators and engendering opposition. The great appropriation bills with which he has been so successful are examples of his skill. I was impressed with this phase of his character by a remark he made concerning the Porto Rican appropriation bill. "I don't want my bill," said he, "made the text of debate on tariff, government and other questions relating to Porto Rico, as well as the whole question of the Philippines." Then he added, with a twinkle in his eye, "Very few of the senators want to talk after 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and I will try and slip the appropriation bill through then." If any one thinks that Senator Allison doesn't know how to get things through, he makes a mistake.

An Arkansas Politician.
Powell Clayton, ambassador to Mexico, was on the floor of the senate during his recent visit to Washington. Looking over the body, he said: "There have been changes here since I left the senate. There is only one man now a member of this body who was here when my term expired in 1871. That is Senator Stewart of Nevada. Senators Allison of Iowa and Jones of Nevada took their seats in 1873, two years after I retired. Stewart afterward retired and was out 12 years and is now back here." Clayton was a senator from Arkansas in the reconstruction days. He has been a leader of the Republican party in his state and always an influential man in his party.

Objected to Tillman's Talk.
One of the most interesting papers presented in congress of late was a memorial protesting against the language of a senator in debate. It was directed at Senator Tillman, who, in the discussion of the southern race question, had spoken in a way to make certain colored societies take exception, and they sent their remonstrances to Senator Hoar and asked him to speak on the subject. Senator Hoar will not do so unless the matter comes before the senate on the report of some committee, and he had the memorial referred to the committee on privileges and elections in order to get a report upon the subject. I am inclined to think that, in case the matter is ever discussed, the colored politicians will have another occasion to protest, as Senator Tillman is not choice in his language when once aroused.

Senator Tillman's Spanish.
Senator Tillman, who lived a long time in New Mexico, is a fluent Spanish scholar and is one of the very best judges of Spanish character. "I have made a thousand speeches in Spanish," said Senator Tillman the other day. "I had to learn to speak Spanish while I was in New Mexico. I know now that if we undertake to hurry changes in the islands we shall have a great deal of trouble. I have been in favor of maintaining a military government because after the Mexican war we had a military government for the territory acquired from Mexico which was highly successful and which is to this day commended by the people who lived there."

Oriental Arms.
One of the rooms occupied by Senator Beveridge looks like the interior of the home of an oriental chief. During his visit to the Philippines, which also took in China and Japan, he acquired the various arms of the savage and civilized tribes. He has a Chinese dagger more than 500 years old, Chinese and Japanese swords, etc.; Filipino spears, bolos and knives, bows and arrows and, in fact, the paraphernalia of all oriental warriors. These adorn the room where Senator Beveridge "burns the midnight oil" in preparation of speeches and the various literary articles of which he is the author.

THE OYSTER SEASON.
The oyster in his bed of oze. Waked with a start from his summer snooze. Opened his shell, and said, with a yawn: "I fear that our season of safety is gone. For my pleasant dreams were disturbed by the jar That is always caused by the letter R. And I know by the keel of that hideous sloop That some of us shortly will be in the soup!" And so they will for the sloop was filled with the finest and fattest. This sloop was sent out by Nick Apostle and these choice oysters are now for sale, done or raw, ready to chew, at his restaurant. You can get them by the plate, dozen, hundred, barrel, dray load, wagon load or car load. Owing to the rush of business the serving of regular meals will be discontinued after this week, but special orders will be served at any hour of the day or night.

Castle Pinckney Sanitarium.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Senator Tillman is doing good work for Castle Pinckney sanitarium. He has secured the favorable consideration of the secretary of war and the surgeon general. The matter is again before the military committee, and he expects to obtain a favorable report from them. After this he expects its speedy passage by the senate. Congressman Elliott is working hard for the success of the measure in the house.

New Depot For Columbus.

COLUMBIA, Ga., March 20.—Messrs. J. M. Eagan and H. Comer of the Central Railroad of Georgia are in the city for the purpose of securing certain property adjacent to the present union depot. It is the intention of the Central officials to enlarge the present carshed, put in more tracks, build elegant waiting rooms, ticket offices, baggage office and add a first-class restaurant, thus giving Columbus first-class depot facilities.

MEN OF MARK.

Dwight L. Moody prided himself on the fact that not one expert shorthand reporter out of 50 could make a verbatim report of his sermons.

Charles L. Tiffany, the founder of the Tiffany establishment in Union square, New York, recently celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday anniversary.

Archbishop Patrick J. Feehan of Chicago makes a fad of the cultivation of flowers. In the season he spends all his spare time in his private garden, attending to his plants.

Former Senator Edmunds of Vermont is said to walk a mile every day over the marble corridors at the capitol in Washington. He has resumed the study of law and has a large practice "on the hill."

Alan Arthur, the son of the deceased president, is rarely seen in New York. He travels a good deal, but makes his home in Paris. He is a man of wide culture, an accomplished linguist and a most agreeable gentleman.

Tennyson Jones and Byron Brown are two worthy citizens of a Georgia settlement. Recently on a wager Tennyson devoured two baked possums at a sitting. Byron is distinguished by having consumed seven boxes of sardines in as many minutes.

Ex-Senator Matt W. Ransom, now 73 years old, raised on his estate, near Welton, N. C., more than 1,000 bales of cotton this season. He has not sold any of it. After George Vanderbilt, General Ransom is the largest landowner in North Carolina.

The millionaire Col. P. H. Huntington, founder of Newport News, said recently, "Virginia is a state for which I have more respect and affection than for any other state in the Union, because it has treated me with a consistent and uniform fairness and liberality."

Senator Vest is a Missourian almost by mistake. He was on his way to California in 1853 to practice law there, was "snowed" out at Georgetown, Mo., and not being too well supplied with money, decided to practice there for the rest of the winter. He did so well that he gave up the Pacific slope plan.

Alderman Conklin of Chicago, better known as "Bathhouse John," is one of the most conspicuous advocates of the Boer cause in Chicago and gives evidence of the fact by wearing a Boer hat, which resembles the golf hat, except that its band is of heavy cloth, representing the colors of the Transvaal republic.

Frederick D. Underwood, second vice president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, was while superintendent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway most popular with his employees. He never forgot a face and, having a good memory, knew by name many of the men to whom he himself was personally unknown.
